

Best Practices for Leadership Events

Phi Sigma Pi is based upon a “tripod of ideals,” Scholarship, Leadership and Fellowship, each of which we value equally. We use these ideals to enhance our skills, improve our campus and serve our community.

Members of Phi Sigma Pi have the opportunity to grow as leaders and make an impact through holding leadership roles, planning events and engaging in the campus community. Here are some ways to help Members grow personally and professionally through Leadership:

1 Get Member Input

The most successful events appeal to a wide array of Members with varying personalities and interests. Take the time to find out what kinds of service events your Members would like to participate to ensure strong attendance and give Members purpose. Ask Members to share how they've volunteered on and off campus.

2 Use On-Campus Resources

Contact the office that oversees service learning and community engagement to connect with local organizations that need your help the most. Also consider asking leaders from other student groups what service projects they've completed in the local community.

3 Make a Meaningful Impact

Demonstrating leadership through service is a great way to share Phi Sigma Pi with others. Invite your friends along so they can help out and learn about PSP in the process.

Bringing Leadership Through Service to Your Chapter

While there are many opportunities for service in the community surrounding your campus, you don't have to go far to make a big difference.

Here are some ways that you can bring volunteer opportunities that promote leadership to your fellow Members:

- Organize a canned food drive
- Make HOBY hugs
- Collect supplies for a local elementary school
- Make dog toys or treats to donate to a local animal shelter
- Write cards to veterans
- Host a bake sale to benefit your local philanthropy
- Collect toiletries and assemble care packages for the homeless
